

How we run stand-alone investigations

A stand-alone investigation is where we look into something that does not come from a complaint from a member of the public.

7 stages

1. Thinking about something that should be investigated

2. Asking people in other organisations what they think

3. Writing a plan

4. Asking people what they think about the plan

5. Thinking about their comments

6. Doing the investigation

7. Writing a report
